Who is it for?

This CPD workshop will appeal equally to counsellors, psychologists and therapists embarking on private practice, either full-time or part-time, as well as to those already working in this way.

How does it work and what will you learn?

The workshop will give you a chance to share your concerns and will also offer excellent practical advice interspersed with reflective exercises. The day will be facilitated by an experienced chartered clinical psychologist and a psychoanalytic psychotherapist, both of whom are university lecturers and have established successful individual and group clinical practices in Harley Street and North London.

Why private practice?

How do you know if you are ready?

Saying goodbye to the old – the fears and fantasies

Examining your strengths and your USP

Adapting to a market economy – putting the mechanisms in place

Marketing your practice

Terms of engagement

Finances and setting your fees

The nuts and bolts of business

Working from home or hiring premises

Supervision, CPD and registration

Working with risk and complex clinical cases

Support and networks

Putting it all into action

Useful information and resources

About the Facilitators

Dr Fiona Starr and Dr Karen Ciclitira are founders of 'Harley Street Psychology' and are established University Lecturers. They are qualified teachers in Higher Education and have been teaching together for nearly 15 years. The combination of their business and clinical experience in the public and private sector and their natural rapport with participants make their workshops engaging, entertaining, and informative.
